Caring for God's creation: Laudato Si Week from 21-28 May

All Catholics, Christians, and people of good will are called to spend our lives caring for God's creation. But what does that mean? How can we spend our days caring for God's creation?

What has the Catholic Church said throughout the centuries about caring for God's creation? What have Pope Francis, Saint John Paul II, and other popes said about this? And why does this matter for your life and your vocation?

Caring for God's creation: Saying creation is more than saying nature.

Let's start with the word "creation." Pope Francis, in his encyclical Laudato Si, writes: "The word 'creation' has a broader meaning than 'nature,' for it has to do with God's loving plan in which every creature has its own value and significance" (LS 76).

His Holiness continues: "Every creature is thus the object of the Father's tenderness, who gives it its place in the world. Even the fleeting life of the least of beings is the object of his love, and in its few seconds of existence, God enfolds it with his affection" (LS 77).

Caring for God's creation: human beings are God's collaborators in creation.

What exactly is the role of human beings in caring for God's creation? Human beings are part of creation. The world does not belong to us, it belongs to God the Creator. We ourselves, by being part of creation, belong to God, although sometimes we forget this. In the words of St. John Paul II:

"In his desire to have and to enjoy rather than to be and to grow, man consumes the resources of the Earth and his own life in an excessive and disordered way. At the root of the senseless destruction of the natural environment lies an anthropological error, which unfortunately is widespread in our day." (Centesimus Annus 37).

In the Book of Genesis, we are called to till and care for the garden of the world (Gen 2:15). "'Tilling' refers to cultivating, ploughing or working, while 'keeping' means caring, protecting, overseeing and preserving. This implies a relationship of mutual responsibility between human beings and nature" (LS 67).

Caring for God's creation: the urgent ecological conversion needed

The climate emergency and biodiversity crisis has become gravely serious in our time, but the act of caring for God's creation has been lived by many people before us. They were people capable of a deep relationship with God as creator and who lived in communion with God's creation.

In contrast, the domineering and destructive position that has disrupted the balance of creation has resulted in the climate crisis we are experiencing.

ST. FINBAR'S PARISH NEWS

This crisis is not separate from the spiritual crisis, as Pope Francis explains in Laudato Si':

"A spirituality which forgets God as all-powerful and Creator is not acceptable. That is how we end up worshipping earthly powers, or ourselves usurping the place of God, even to the point of claiming an unlimited right to trample his creation underfoot. The best way to restore men and women to their rightful place, putting an end to their claim to absolute dominion over the Earth, is to speak once more of the figure of a Father who creates and who alone owns the world. Otherwise, human beings will always try to impose their own laws and interests on reality" (LS 75).

A new relationship with creation "also entails a loving awareness that we are not disconnected from the rest of creatures, but joined in a splendid universal communion. As believers, we do not look at the world from without but from within, conscious of the bonds with which the Father has linked us to all beings" (LS 220).

Laudato Si week in Australia is different to the rest of the world as the Australian Bishops also want to mark National reconciliation week 27 May to 3 June and Sorry day 26 May.

LAUDATO SI' WEEK 21st to 28th May

To celebrate the eighth anniversary of the publication of the encyclical Laudato Si'. "Hope for the Earth. Hope for humanity", will be this year's guiding theme. The film "The Letter", which tells the story of four "social poets" affected first-hand by the climate crisis who travel to Rome to meet Pope Francis, will be the main resource guiding the week's events, encouraging people to organize community screenings.

You are invited to watch the movie "The Letter" on Tuesday 23rd May at 7.30pm in the Parish Hall
